Threads of War is about a Midwest American boy who is ripped from his riotous and somewhat ribald teenage years and placed into the United States Army. His intellect and predisposition for the ability to learn languages lands him a position in the elite Army Security Agency where he is trained at the Presidio of Monterey to become a Vietnamese linguist and spy. Completing his linguistic academia, and ribald antics, Dee Tailor is shipped off to Davis Station at Tan Son Nhut Airbase in Saigon where he and his side kick Scooter ply their spying skills to help defeat the communist aggression. In the end an unseen force undermines the Americans and paves the way for the communists to finally occupy South Vietnam. Threads of War reveals the real reason the Vietnam War ended as it did.
