Parachute cord or paracord is a nylon rope originally used by paratroopers in World War II for their parachutes. When they landed, they would repurpose the cord for other things such as belts, securing gear, or building shelters. This guide will show you how to create four different styles of paracord bracelets also known as survival bracelets. In a survival situation you can undo the bracelet and use to the paracord. One woven paracord bracelet contains many feet of paracord. The individual strands inside of the paracord can also be separated and used for things such as fishing line.
